To whom it may concern;

Questar is looking to drop their rebates for basement, crawlspace, and attic insulation from $.35 to $.20. We at Patterson Construction feel this not a good idea. With the collapse in the housing market nationwide this program allowing most people in Utah to get deeply discounted or free insulation has been a great way for contractors to make ends meet while waiting for this economy to turn. Of course the service we are providing helps Utah families greatly by providing a means to save a substantial amount of money on utility costs, and also by extending the lives of furnaces and a/c units. Also as a whole we are using less energy and making a smaller impact on our environment. This has been a great program for everyone involved and is one government program that actually works.

Sincerely,

James Patterson
